

Reinert Center for Transformative Teaching and Learning

FIRE DRILL WORKSHOP SERIES:

What's Your Teaching Plan in Case of an Academic Disruption?

The March 2020 pivot to online instruction might be a distant memory, but disruptions are increasingly becoming part of academic life. These disruptions might be brief, or they might last for days, weeks, or even months. How prepared are you if you needed to quickly pivot your in-person course to an online format? What would you need to do and how would you do it? Building on the lessons learned from 2020 and the new expectations and regulations for distance teaching, this 3-part workshop series revisits some of key points, requirements, and actions necessary to maintain a continuous, quality learning experience for students.

During the series, participants will:

- Identify types of disruptions, evaluate the emergency readiness of their courses, and prepare a continuity checklist (February 14).
- Develop plans for different disruption scenarios and consider accessibility during disruptions (February 21).
- Revisit effective practices for using the distance education technologies necessary to maintain instructional continuity during a disruption (February 28).

Attendance at all three workshops is recommended, but not required.

Workshop #1

What is an Academic Disruption?
Friday, February 14

Workshop #2

Academic Disruptions, Actions, and Accessibility
Friday, February 21

Workshop #3

A Refresher on Distance Teaching with Technology
Friday, February 28

Place & Time:

Wuller Hall 222
2:00-3:30pm

Registration:

Click HERE to register

or visit
slu.edu/cttl/events

Wuller Hall 204

314-977-3944

www.slu.edu/cttl